Heart Drive Needs Your Contribution

If your neighborhood volunteer didn't find you at home on Sunday (Heart Sunday in Appomattox), you can still "open up your heart" to a good cause and send in one dollar — five — ten or more to HEART, Appomattox, Va.

County chairman Ivey Holland has announced a goal this year of $1200. A good portion of this is returned to the county in the form of life-saving equipment used by the Rescue Squad. Other funds given to heart research offer hope for future happier lives for all the citizens.

The Pastor Speaks

Rev. Thomas Waddill

I have asked Chaplain Edward G. Temple, Jr., of Lynchburg General Hospital, to write a series of articles describing the work of a hospital chaplain.

To do the work of the Chaplain one must clearly understand the particular function of this position. In other words, what is the role of the Hospital Chaplain? What is his function in the hospital setting? What exactly is this person to be to the people to whom he seeks to minister? I think he must see himself in at least 3 positions.

The first is that of being a representative of GOD. To me, this is the key that unlocks every door ahead that can be unlocked. To be sure, each person in the hospital represents GOD in a different way because the nature of the healing ministry involves many areas of concern, such as office work, dietary, housekeeping, in addition to the actual medical treatment and religious encouragement. Each person has a duty to glorify God by living the best he has to offer daily with the particular talent he possesses.

Does not the Bible teach us that there is a time and place for all things, and there is an obligation on the part of every man to use wisely that which God has given him?

In the care of the sick, the compassionate spirit manifested is the one supremely known to all in the form of the Great Physician.

All are representatives of God, and the Chaplain is certainly no exception. Rather, he is first, last, and always a representative of God-- whatever else he may or may not be or do.

("The Chaplain as a Minister" the second part of this role, will follow next week.)

Must I Forgive

Lesson for February 28, 1965

A necessary miracle — that's what forgiveness is. It is necessary because without it the entire world, and the church too—all human life in fact, would no longer be humane, but only a bloody meaningless welter of anger, hate and revenge. Nothing in life is more certain than quarrels, injuries, insults and injuries. All around the world today we see the effects of hatred and revenge and memories of past offenses, all leading to private feuds and public wars. But forgiveness is not only necessary to keep life from being a hell on earth, it is a miracle. It calls for a kind of divine make-believe, for true forgiveness wipes out the past as if it had never been. Men acknowledge it is a miracle every time someone says: "I can't forgive that!"

Hy's Situation

One thing you can always count on, no matter who you are or where you live. Sooner or later, and maybe every day, somebody is going to do you wrong. They will be about you, or accuse you of bad motives you never thought of, or take (perhaps legally, perhaps not) something that by rights belongs to you. There are a thousand ways you can be hurt, and the most dreadful way is to hurt you by bringing pain or trouble to those you love. And yet, while the wrong (of some kind) is a future certainty, the wrong itself produces an "iffy" situation. You see, necessary as forgiveness may be, the Bible always — as between man and man, or between man and God —assures that before forgiveness there must be repentance. Call it sorrow, regret, repentance — without it forgiveness is only a dream. So Jesus (Matt. 18:15-17) gives some very practical directions on how to persuade the one who has harmed you into admitting he was wrong, or did wrong. You begin with a private personal interview. There's no use in spreading your quarrel beyond yourselves. But if the rascal won't listen? The reader will note the word "if" coming five times in these three verses. Jesus suggests how you can get through these IF's — all but one. It is clear that as the Master knew only too well, there are situations so bad that nothing can save them.

No Limits

As Jesus was speaking Simon Peter was thinking. He was thinking in figures — not a good way to think about forgiveness. Suppose I succeed every time in making my enemy admit he was wrong, do I have to forgive him every time he repents? What's the statute of limitations on forgiveness? How many times am I required to forgive — perhaps seven times? Peter must have thought he was being generous. If so, he must have been set back suddenly by Jesus' answer —Seventy times seven!

The Joy

It's your heart you are responsible for — not somebody else's. You may not be quite sure when "I am sorry" is sincerely meant; but you can be pretty sure whether your own forgiveness comes from your heart or is just a pretty speech. Forgiveness not from the heart is no miracle; anybody can say the words. But heart-sincere forgiveness is a miracle. "I will forgive but I'll never forget!" is not Christian forgiveness, for it keeps the old wound fresh and sore. Forgiveness is a healing medicine; grudging half-forgiveness is no forgiveness at all: it is infection poured into the wound. Forgiveness from the heart means forgiving and forgetting, it means starting over again, it means brotherhood in fact as well as in name. You know Jesus often called God "your Father;" but to the unforgiving he says, "My Father will (punish you.) God will not be called "Father" of an unforgiving men.

Future Farmers Of America Week February 20-27

This week as Future Farmers of America observe National FFA Week, February 20-27, it is proper that we pause and reflect on the industry of agriculture. An industry which is America's largest and most basic.

It would be difficult for us here in America to think of not having enough food to eat. Our abundance seems to reflect more of a problem than a blessing. Yet it is a blessing from our Father in Heaven. The American Farmer with his great knowledge and efficient methods has produced enough food for himself and approximately 31 other individuals. We should praise him not destroy him for the ability with which he feeds this nation.

Agriculture embraces more than farming. The farmer produces the product such as meat and grain but countless other individuals supply him with needed materials to produce his commodities. It is estimated that six million Americans are working in jobs that supply products and services to the American farmer. Also his product must be handled, processed, and sold. Here we find another seven million farm workers. These individuals in combination with the seven million farm workers constitute about forty per cent of the working population in America. It is no wonder that Future Farmers are saying this week—"Agriculture Is big;it is dynamic.

Today so many individuals feel that there is no future in this great industry for a young boy or girl. It is true that the opportunities are limited for those who may wish to become an efficient and productive farmer. But for those who are rich in farming experiences, there are many opportunities for service in agriculture. Many of the jobs in the broad field of agriculture require a knowledge of farming; thus the rural boy with this knowledge has a distinct advantage for gainful and rewarding occupations. College graduates in agriculture now find that there are over two job opportunities for each graduate. The opportunities for these individuals are increasing. If America is to continue to maintain its position of abundance in agriculture we will need more, not fewer, individuals of ability to furnish the continued leadership that will be needed.

Agriculture is a dynamic industry and certainly one that is challenging. Our youth who are preparing themselves for future occupations in this field should receive our wishes for success and happiness.
